Profile

Dennis J. Nolan is a shareholder with Anderson Kill's insurance recovery group, and he co-chairs the firm's Restaurant, Retail & Hospitality Industry Group and Marine Cargo Insurance Group. He also is a member of the firm's Cyber Insurance Recovery Group.

Dennis guides policyholders in various businesses and industries in recovering the insurance proceeds owed them by their insurance companies. He has helped clients, such as major retailers, banks, steel companies, manufacturers, and property owners and managers, maximize their recoveries under many lines of insurance, including directors and officers, errors and omissions, general liability, ocean marine cargo, cyber, and property. He has litigated insurance coverage disputes in federal (including bankruptcy) and state courts across the country and in mediation and arbitration (both domestic and international). Dennis also has counseled clients on the financial and strategic importance of pre-litigation resolutions in the right situation. He also has advised clients regarding contractual risk transfer issues, including drafting and reviewing contracts that contain insurance provisions, to ensure the parties' intent is properly effectuated.

Dennis writes and lectures on insurance topics, and, to help protect policyholders' rights throughout the country, he has filed numerous amicus briefs in partnership with the non-profit advocacy group United Policyholders, including in the United States Supreme Court and various federal and state appellate courts.
